The Portillo children have been in the Alamo school for about two years and a half. When they came to school they could not speak nor write a word of English. All are very bright students, and particularly little Genoveva. In her letter to Mr. Tighe she says, "I wish I could express the gratiting I feel for the Upited States government for giving schooling to me, as well as other Mexicans that are without home and country. If I return to Mexico, as I have thought so many times, when peace and prosperity come again I'll never forget what the United States have done for me and I'll ever be grateful."

WIN HOLIDAYS BY PROMPT ATTENDANCE

At the Bailey school there were four rooms which gained half holidays through having no tardies and 99 percent attendance. These were the high fifth taught by Miss Anne Ray Moss; the low sixth, taught by Miss Lilian Phillips; the high seventh, taught by Miss Nora Bradley, and the high eighth taught by Miss Emma-Lee Lott. Three rooms gained quarter day holidays for having 99 percent attendance. These were Miss Kate Guion's low first room, the low second, taught by Miss Mary Poel, and the low seventh room, of which Miss Elizabeth Harris is teacher.

BOYS OF AOY MAKE

ARTICLES OF WOOD The boys of the Aoy school have recently completed a little semi-circular bracket shelf, and are now starting in on the making of whick broom holders. In the low fourth grade the best work on the shelves has been done by Felipe Zamora, Francisco Soto, Simon Sapien and Gilberto Hernandez, In the high fourth grade Jose Torres, Antonio Rodriquez and Teodora Espinoza have turned out the best made bracket shelves.

For the mechanical drawing of these models which the pupils make the day before they work in the wood, Pedro Pachero and Domingo Rivers have the best drawings, R. E. Clark is the manual training instructor at the Aoy.

Artillery Drill.

Through the courtesy of Capt. Ernest B. Scott, commander of Battery C, 6th U. S. field artillery, El Pasoans who attend the horse show will have the pleasure of witnessing a horse-artillery drill for the first time in the history of El Paso, as Battery C is the first of this type of artillery which has ever been stationed at Fort Bliss. The Sixth field artillery is the only regiment of horse artillery in the army and it is generally conceded that the drill of a battery of horse artillery is the most spectacular of military evolutions. The cannoneers, instead of riding on the caissons as in the field artillery proper are mounted on horses, and the increase in speed, which it is possible to attain, makes this type of drill a very fascinating spectacle. Horse artillery is designed to accompany cavalry when the latter is acting independently of infantry, as when on raids or reconnoissances in force and would probably be used extensively in connection with the cavalry if the United States should intervene in Mexico, as these two branches of the army are peculiarly well fitted for operations in the northern tier of Mexican states. The exhibition drill Saturday will afford an excellent opportunity to see this very efficient branch of the army in action.
